Summary

This consultation paper seeks feedback on options for refining international criminal history checks used by the Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency (AHPRA) in assessing applications for registration for the 14 health professions regulated under the Health Practitioner Regulation National Law Act (National Law) as in force in each state and territory.

You may wish to provide general comments; and/or comments on the issues associated with the different options, the option that you consider is the best available, and the reasons why.

Please provide feedback by email to criminalhistoryconsult@ahpra.gov.au by close of business on 17 August 2012.

Background

The National Registration and Accreditation Scheme (National Scheme) established 14 National Boards under the National Law. The 14 National Boards are:

- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Practice Board of Australia (Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Practitioners will be regulated under the National Law from 1 July 2012)
- Chinese Medicine Board of Australia (Chinese Medicine Practitioners will be regulated under the National Law from 1 July 2012)
- Chiropractic Board of Australia
- Dental Board of Australia
- Medical Board of Australia
- Nursing and Midwifery Board of Australia
- Medical Radiation Practice Board of Australia (Medical Radiation Practitioners will be regulated under the National Law from 1 July 2012)
- Occupational Therapy Board of Australia (Occupational Therapists will be regulated under the National Law from 1 July 2012)
- Optometry Board of Australia
- Osteopathy Board of Australia
- Pharmacy Board of Australia
- Physiotherapy Board of Australia
- Podiatry Board of Australia and
- Psychology Board of Australia.

AHPRA works in partnership with each of the National Boards to implement the requirements of the National Scheme, which has maintaining public safety at its heart.

Further information is available at www.ahpra.gov.au.

Relevant sections of the National Law

Section 4 of the National Law provides that a body exercising functions under the Law, such as a National Board or AHPRA, must exercise its functions having regard to the objectives and guiding principles of the national registration and accreditation scheme.

The objectives of the national registration and accreditation scheme are –

(a) to provide for the protection of the public by ensuring that only health practitioners who are suitably trained and qualified to practise in a competent and ethical manner are registered; and
(b) to facilitate workforce mobility across Australia by reducing the administrative burden for health practitioners wishing to move between participating jurisdictions or to practise in more than one participating jurisdiction; and

(c) to facilitate the provision of high quality education and training of health practitioners; and

(d) to facilitate the rigorous and responsive assessment of overseas-trained health practitioners; and

(e) to facilitate access to services provided by health practitioners in accordance with the public interest; and

(f) to enable the continuous development of a flexible, responsive and sustainable Australian health workforce and to enable innovation in the education of, and service delivery by, health practitioners.

Section 79 of the National Law provides that:

1. before deciding an application for registration, a National Board must check the applicant’s criminal history.

2. For the purposes of checking an applicant’s criminal history, a National Board may obtain a written report about the criminal history of the applicant from any of the following—

   (a) CrimTrac;

   (b) a police commissioner;

   (c) an entity in a jurisdiction outside Australia that has access to records about the criminal history of persons in that jurisdiction.

The National Law defines ‘criminal history’ as:

(a) every conviction of the person for an offence, in a participating jurisdiction or elsewhere, and whether before or after the commencement of this Law;

(b) every plea of guilty or finding of guilt by a court of the person for an offence, in a participating jurisdiction or elsewhere, and whether before or after the commencement of this Law and whether or not a conviction is recorded for the offence;

(c) every charge made against the person for an offence, in a participating jurisdiction or elsewhere, and whether before or after the commencement of this Law.

As a result, section 79 of the National Law requires that the Board consider criminal history from jurisdictions outside of Australia. The current approach to checking criminal histories involves:

1. seeking an Australian criminal history through CrimTrac and

2. requiring the applicant to sign a declaration on the registration application form disclosing their criminal history in all countries including Australia. In the case of a declaration that the applicant has no criminal history outside Australia, no further evidence, audit or authentication is currently required, nor sought. Where a criminal history is disclosed, further investigations are made and the criminal history is assessed according to the relevant Board’s Criminal History Registration Standard.

To balance the requirements for public protection with the need for responsive and timely application and assessment processes for health practitioners seeking registration in Australia, National Boards and AHPRA have been considering possible options to refine the mechanisms for international criminal history checks.

This paper explores the issues associated with these options and seeks feedback on the best approach.
Extent of the issue

Of the 52,445 initial criminal history screens conducted by CrimTrac on behalf of AHPRA in the first year of the National Scheme (primarily for those applying for initial registration), 2,992 (6%) had some form of disclosable court outcome within Australia.

The definition of a ‘disclosable court outcome’ is set by each state and territory and is not consistent. In some states it includes a traffic offence, in others the definition is more narrow.

Of the cohort of applicants who were found to have a disclosable court outcome, only 449 (15% of the cohort) were assessed as having court outcomes with the potential to affect registration. After consideration by a National Board, 40 (9%) of the 449 assessed as having the potential to affect registration, led to action on applications, as explained in the 2010/11 AHPRA and National Boards Annual Report, which also has more detail on criminal history screening. The Annual Report is published under the ‘Legislation and Publications’ tab of the AHPRA website.

With the assumption that a similar return rate would be experienced for the 5,000 – 10,000 international applicants for registration received per year (the assumption will be tested against overseas Police Certificate results when available), it would be expected that 300 - 600 (or 6% of international applicants) would return a positive criminal history.

Generalising from the evidence collected in the first year of the National Scheme, it is projected that 15% (45 - 90) of these international applicants with a positive criminal history would be assessed as having the potential to affect registration, because the nature of the offence(s) may affect the practitioner’s suitability to practise the profession. This estimate is likely to be at the high end, as AHPRA would not receive criminal histories which have been extinguished by any rehabilitation of offender legislation in source countries. If similar to Australia, this would limit criminal history to convictions recorded in the 10 years preceding the date of application and would exclude charges.

Source countries and availability of Criminal Clearance Certificates (CCC)

A sample of the top five source countries for international applicants is provided below. This sample was drawn from Queensland registrations during May 2011. The availability of CCC and any limitations are also detailed in the table below.

Attachment 1 lists the countries from which the Department of Immigration and Citizenship (DIAC) reasonably expects visa applicants to obtain CCCs. This document provides information on where and how the applicant may obtain the CCC in each country. It also advises any restrictions to obtaining a CCC, such as that a person must have resided in Anguilla for over six months to be eligible to have a police clearance certificate issued. Some countries (such as Burma/Myanmar) require physical presentation in person to obtain a clearance certificate. Accordingly, the rules to apply in some instances will be quite complex and will vary between countries.

1 A Police Certificate documents an individual’s police record

There are also complex policy requirements relating to issues such as:

- the periods for which criminal clearance certificates would be required. For example, this may be for:
  - each jurisdiction in which registration has been held within the last five or ten years to align with current Certificate of Registration Status requirements, or
  - each jurisdiction of residence since age 18
- requests for exemptions on the basis of fear of persecution
- the period of validity for a previously issued CCC, and
- whether certified copies of CCCs will be accepted.

Costs related to requiring CCC with application

For some applicants, depending on individual circumstance, obtaining CCCs may be an onerous requirement. It may be particularly onerous for International Medical Graduates, because the majority of these practitioners have practised in two or more countries and would need to obtain CCCs from each of these countries. Requiring CCCs with an application would also add to the time required to prepare and submit an application.

There would also be an additional assessment cost for AHPRA associated with the determination of jurisdictions for which a CCC should be provided. The applicant’s curriculum vitae and/or registration history would need to be assessed and cross referenced to ensure CCCs were provided for each relevant jurisdiction. This will inevitably add time to assessment processing.

AHPRA has already experienced the impact of this kind of additional assessment requirement in relation to the implementation of the Certificates of Registration Status (CORS) requirement. When a practitioner has practised in other jurisdictions, a Certificate of Registration Status is required from those jurisdictions. This involves the need to confirm jurisdictions for which CORS are required (in support of any given application). Aligning the timing and jurisdictional requirements for both CORS and CCCs would mean the same assessment process could be applied to both evidentiary requirements. However, the number of incomplete applications (and associated cost) is also likely to rise if the applicant is required to supply CCCs with their application.

It should be noted that CORS are provided directly to AHPRA from the international regulation authority. This is a common practice of information exchange/sharing between like regulatory authorities. It is more common, however, for law enforcement bodies to provide criminal history information/clearance only to the subject of the check. AHPRA would therefore be relying on the applicant to forward the criminal clearance certificate with their application documentation.

Visa assessment as criminal history clearance

Many international applicants are required to obtain a form of criminal clearance for immigration purposes, however this is not a requirement of all visa classes.

The base requirement applied by immigration across all visa classes is assessment against the ‘character requirement’. Section 501 of the Migration Act 1958(Cth) contains a character test to ensure that visa applicants, visa holders, relevant non-citizen sponsors, and non-applicant family members are of acceptable character.

The test puts the onus on the person to show that they are of good character. As part of the character test, the immigration case officer may require the applicant to provide CCCs from relevant jurisdictions. The period applied by DIAC is any jurisdiction of residence for 12 months or more, within the previous ten years.
As DIAC has discretion on whether to require CCCs during the immigration process, accepting proof of visa as proof of acceptable criminal clearance evidence is not necessarily a robust approach. For example, DIAC has advised that for the 457 visa class (used by the majority of internationally qualified applicants) a declaration that an applicant has no criminal history is sufficient to meet the character requirement under the Migration Act.

Criminal history checking by international regulatory authorities

AHPRA has made inquiries with overseas regulatory authorities to determine if AHPRA could rely on the Certificate of Registration Status (CORS) as evidence of criminal history status, where the overseas authority has an equivalent criminal history screening process.

The responses to date have demonstrated very little consistency in approaches to criminal record checking across international regulatory authorities. Accordingly, a Certificate of Good Standing/Certificate of Registration Status only provides evidence of an applicant’s previous professional conduct and cannot be relied on in relation to an applicant’s criminal history.

Onus to conduct the criminal history check and provide a certificate – applicant or AHPRA?

While overseas regulatory authorities may provide guidance to assist applicants obtain an appropriate criminal clearance document, those consulted to date do not take responsibility for conducting the check, nor facilitating a (third party) check through agency-agency liaison with international law enforcement bodies.

Liaison relationships do exist, and are effective for purposes such as authentication of documentation, however, a large percentage of jurisdictions will only deal with and provide a CCC directly to the practitioner. Some jurisdictions have stringent requirements which allow third party checks in specific circumstances, but a number of others will not provide a checking service, or any information, to third parties under any circumstances. Accordingly, it is not possible for AHPRA to obtain the CCC and applicants would need to have this responsibility.

Possible options

The options and issues are complex. The scope and content of criminal history documentation is likely to vary across countries. In addition, different approaches to the criminal law and varying political environments may mean that it may be difficult to determine the accuracy of an international criminal history, or the weight to be assigned to a particular offence.

Listed below are a number of options on how to process international criminal history checks for internationally qualified practitioners applying for registration, and their associated risks and benefits. These options have been developed taking into account the requirements of the National Law, including the objectives and guiding principles, and the risks associated with practitioners who have an international criminal history.

Option 1: Applicant declaration only

This option requires the applicant declaration only - no additional evidence of criminal history is required, sought or obtained from jurisdictions outside Australia (this is the current approach).

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Benefits of Option 1</th>
<th>Risks</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A false declaration on application may be deemed provision of false or misleading information and can be actioned under Part 8 of the National Law including the cancellation of registration</td>
<td>Declarations/statements made on application are not statutory declarations, as such there are lesser penalties or remedies available for provision of false information</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>No difficulties in communicating with overseas jurisdictions, either by the applicant or by AHPRA, meaning that assessment processes are not delayed</td>
<td>To investigate/pursue action under Part 8 for all instances of false information would be resource intensive</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Benefits of Option 1 (continued) | Risks
No additional cost or resource implications (unless pursuing Part 8 action/s) | Minimal consequence or deterrence for not declaring overseas criminal history
 | Unlikely that AHPRA would easily gain evidence/proof of false declarations

Option 2: Applicant provides criminal history clearance evidence with application

This option requires the internationally qualified applicant to:

- provide evidence of criminal history clearance, or
- provide/facilitate provision of criminal history information from jurisdictions outside Australia.

| Benefits of Option 2 | Risks |
Applications will be incomplete until applicants provide all the necessary information | Delays for applicants communicating with overseas jurisdictions to gain the required information
No additional cost for the National Scheme and minimal resource implications | The National Law is not binding on overseas jurisdictions (spent convictions and release of information)
Provides additional assurance to verify declaration from applicant | Potential for the submission of fraudulent documents – specialist knowledge and resources are required to assess the evidence
 | Limitations (time and location) as to scope of information applicant must provide
 | Relies on the honesty of applicants and carries risks similar to those detailed under option one
 | May add significant time to and burden of preparation of applications (by applicant)

Option 3: AHPRA obtains clearance/information from jurisdictions outside Australia when processing application

This option places the onus on AHPRA to obtain criminal history clearance or evidence from jurisdictions outside Australia for internationally qualified applicants.

| Benefits of Option 3 | Risks |
Increased the veracity of criminal history information obtained directly from overseas authorities | Significant increase in resources required to manage applications
Reduces risk of fraudulent documents | The National Law is not binding on overseas jurisdictions in relation to spent convictions and release of information
Provides additional assurance to verify declaration from applicant | Poor or no liaison relationship with some jurisdictions, which may result in extended delays or failure to gain the necessary documentation
 | Likely to lead to significant time delays in assessing applications for registration, beyond AHPRA’s control
Option 4: Applicant makes declaration and AHPRA undertakes random sample audit

This option requires internationally qualified applicants to make declarations on their registration applications, and AHPRA to undertake random audits, with clear and publicised deterrent consequences.

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Benefits of Option 4</th>
<th>Risks</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>No delays at the time of assessing applications</td>
<td>Need to determine from what time period/locality criminal history information will be required/sought, such as for the last 10 years to be consistent with some Boards’ requirements for Certificates of Registration Status (as is the case for the Medical Board of Australia for limited registration)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Less resource implications compared with option three</td>
<td>Additional resources required to undertake audit process</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reduces risk of fraudulent declarations from applicant</td>
<td>Effectiveness of audit process will depend on the liaison relationships AHPRA establishes with organisations issuing Criminal Clearance Certificates (CCC) and subject matter expertise within AHPRA about CCC contacts in different countries, which would need to be developed</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Provides additional assurance to verify applicants’ declarations</td>
<td>The National Law is not binding on overseas jurisdictions in relation to spent convictions and release of information</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

The options – where to from here?

Option 1 is to maintain the status quo. In light of the above information, Option 3 may not be viable.

Therefore, the two most likely options to manage international criminal history checking are:

- Option 2 - requires all internationally qualified applicants to provide criminal clearance certificates with their application, or
- Option 4 - relies on applicant declarations supported by a well publicised and targeted audit to assure compliance.

Option 2 is likely to be more expensive and time consuming for both applicants and AHPRA. It may significantly add to the time required to become registered. This may be difficult to justify in light of the very small numbers likely to have an international criminal history. However, there is an argument that requiring CCCs with applications is in itself a deterrent for those who have a criminal history.

Option 4 uses the mechanism of a targeted audit to assure compliance with the declaration approach and recognises the minimal risk of registering an applicant with a significant criminal history. It also recognises that requiring CCCs with applications cannot extinguish the risk of registering an applicant with a criminal history given rehabilitation of offenders legislation in source countries. It is likely to be less expensive and time-consuming than option one.

Work will be required to implement whichever option National Boards ultimately decide to adopt, including making necessary administrative changes and establishing a communication strategy for international applicants. The communication strategy will include:

- clarification of requirements for applicants with dual nationality
- the relationship between criminal history checking and each Board’s criminal history registration standard, which the Board will apply where a practitioner has a criminal history, and
- the scope of international criminal history checks, and coverage of international tribunals such as war crimes tribunals.
Your feedback

The National Boards and AHPRA are seeking general comments and/or comments on the issues associated with the different options, the option that you consider is the best available, and the reasons why.

Please provide feedback by email to criminalhistoryconsult@ahpra.gov.au by close of business 17 August 2012.

The Boards generally publish submissions on their websites to encourage discussion and inform the community and stakeholders. Please let us know if you do not want us to publish your submission, or want us to treat all or part of it as confidential.

We will not place on our website, or make available to the public, submissions that contain offensive or defamatory comments or which are outside the scope of reference. Before publication, we may remove personally-identifying information from submissions, including contact details.

The views expressed in submissions are those of the individuals or organisations who submit them and their publication does not imply any acceptance of, or agreement with, these views by the Boards or AHPRA.

The Boards also accept submissions made in confidence. These submissions will not be published on the website or elsewhere. Submissions may be confidential because they include personal experiences or other sensitive information. Any request for access to a confidential submission will be determined in accordance with the Freedom of Information Act 1982 (Cth) which has provisions designed to protect personal information and information given in confidence.

Department of Immigration and Citizenship requirements

Character Requirements

Everyone who wishes to enter Australia is required to be of good character. In order for the Australian Government to determine whether you are of good character, you may be asked to provide a police certificate. Unless otherwise advised by the Department of Immigration and Citizenship (DIAC), police certificates are not required for people under the age of 16 years.

Some Citizenship applicants are also required to obtain overseas police certificates. You can obtain further information about whether you will need to provide an overseas police certificate from your citizenship application form or from www.citizenship.gov.au/

This document explains how to obtain a police certificate. Please check the list of countries below. If you have lived in any one of them for a total of one year or more in the last 10 years, you must get a police certificate from the authorities in that country.

If you have spent a cumulative total of 12 months or more in the last 10 years working for the same employer on a merchant ship, cruise ship, private yacht or oil rig, you should request a police certificate from the relevant authority in the country under whose flag the ship sails or country of ownership of the rig.

Police certificates are often only available to current residents or to citizens. Where these restrictions apply, it will be indicated under the relevant country.

Note: The term ‘residents’ under each country listing refers to applicants who are currently living in that particular country, whether they are citizens or non-citizens. ‘Form 80’ referred to in this document is the ‘Personal Particulars for Character Assessment’ form and is available from the department or the website: www.immi.gov.au

Details shown are subject to change without notice by the authorities of the particular country, and the Australian Government can take no responsibility for the accuracy of the information. If the country has a website listed, it is recommended you check it for up to date information on procedures.

All details concerning you that are provided to the Australian government by a foreign government or law enforcement authority will be treated as confidential. For further details, see information form 993i, Safe guarding your personal information. This is available on the department’s website www.immi.gov.au/allforms/

Military certificates

If you are a current member of a military force and have spent more than 12 months serving in a country other than your country of citizenship, you will need to provide a letter from the relevant military organisation attesting to your character. This is generally a letter from your commanding officer stating that you have not been convicted of any criminal offence during your time in the military.

Police certificates are still required for every country in which you have served for the periods set out above. This includes where you have been stationed at a military base in a foreign country.

If a country is not listed in this guide, please contact your nearest DIAC office for further information.

BRAZIL

Residents
If you are a citizen, you need to provide two different types of police certificates:
• a police check issued by the Federal Justice Ministry (Justica Federal)
• a police check issued by the State Justice department (Justica Estadual, Tribunal de Justica, Secretaria de Seguranca Publica)

For the police check issued by the Federal Justice Ministry, contact the local justice department for instructions, or see http://www.jf.jus.br/cjf

For the police check issued by the State Justice Department, contact the state authority directly, using the local directory for assistance. You may be able to apply for this certificate on line (depending on the issuing state), otherwise it can only be applied for in person.

If you are a non-citizen, you will need to provide the Federal Justice Ministry certificate. Non-citizens will not be able to obtain a clearance from the State Justice department.
Non-residents
If you are not living in Brazil, or are unable to apply in person for a Federal Justice clearance, you will need to give power of attorney (Procuração) to a relative or friend to obtain the Federal Justice certificate on your behalf. The power of attorney needs to specify the reason for the request and be accompanied by a certified copy of your National ID and CPF card and passport bio-data page.

State Justice department checks cannot be obtained by non-residents.

Online applications
Federal Justice checks are available on-line. State Justice checks may be available on-line but this will depend on the issuing state.

Application to include: certified copies of your National ID card (both sides), Brazilian tax card (CPF) and passport bio data page.

The original police certificate must also be professionally translated into English.

Fee: nil.
