Subject: comments for english exam

Dear Kathleen,

first of all, Thank you very much for giving chance to share my views with you.

As being a final year student, I would like to say that my university( Flinders University) has been very successful for giving the best knowledge to all students. My 2 years of journey as a student has given me good knowledge of nursing programme which also include language assessment.

I believe that if we have passed our study from english speaking country then we don't need to give any language exam after finishing study successfully.

Our english has been tested from university. It is really very stressful for me to stop my future here just because of one english exam though i have passed all exams from university.

Australia has multicultural society and if a person is able to communicate with others from their fields such as with patients and nursing staff , then it is unjust for them to rely on language test after finishing study.

I believe that you will think seriously about this matter because it is my trust that i will get honest result from Australian government.

Thanks
