Meeting of the Nursing and Midwifery Board of Australia 29 January in the AHPRA office, Melbourne

The Nursing and Midwifery Board of Australia (the National Board or NMBA) is the national regulator for nursing and midwifery in Australia. It is established under the Health Practitioner Regulation National Law, as in force in each state and territory (the National Law).

The NMBA meets monthly and considers a range of matters, the most important of which are published in this Communiqué.

In order to facilitate engagement with local stakeholders across states and territories, the NMBA now holds its monthly meeting in a different state and territory every two to three months.

This helps the NMBA to gain a better understanding of the jurisdictional matters relating to the regulation of enrolled nurses, registered nurses, midwives and students.

It also supports information sharing on the NMBA's strategic priorities, projects and regulatory functions with local representatives from the professional and industrial organisations, education providers and employers, health department and members of the local state or territory board of the NMBA.

Specialist registration position statement

The NMBA has completed a project exploring the need for registration of speciality practice within the nursing profession. As a result of the project the NMBA has concluded that will be no additional recognition of nursing specialties. Further information about this will be made available shortly on the NMBA website.

Preliminary consultation for Registered nurse standards for practice

The NMBA is conducting preliminary consultation with key internal stakeholders on Registered nurse standards for practice (incorporating a review of the current national competency standards for the registered nurse).

Since the competency standards for the registered nurse last reviewed in 2006, there have been substantial developments in role and scope of practice across Australia. There are also changes in education and training leading to registration and the regulatory framework within which registration and enrolment of nurses and midwives occurs. This has provided the catalyst to review the standards to make sure they reflect contemporary practice and the right educational preparation.

Following this period of internal consultation, extensive public consultation will be conducted in the near future.

Nursing and Midwifery Codes of Professional Conduct and Professional boundaries review

The NMBA has a suite of codes and guidelines to provide guidance to the nursing and midwifery professions. A project has been approved to review the following documents through extensive public consultation during 2015:

- i. A nurse's guide to professional boundaries

ICN sponsorship of commercial exhibit

The NMBA will participate in the International Council of Nurses (ICN) conference 2015 (ICN 2015) in Seoul, Korea from 19 to 23 June 2015. The conference theme is Global Citizen, Global Nursing.

Nurses, regulators and educators, both locally and internationally, will have an opportunity to engage with the NMBA face-to-face. This in turn facilitates the recognition of the NMBA as a leader in nursing and midwifery in Australia.

New approach to international criminal history checks

As of 4 February 2015, National Boards and Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency (AHPRA) have implemented a new procedure for checking international criminal history to provide greater public protection. This new approach requires certain applicants and practitioners to apply for an international criminal history check from an AHPRA approved supplier.

This approach aligns our international criminal history checks (ICHC) with our domestic history checks and aims to be fair and reasonable for practitioners. It also provides the Australian community with greater assurance by implementing additional safeguards to manage risks to the public from someone's international criminal history.
